

Ms. Pooja Agrewal, author, co-author and theme expert, in conversation with Ms. Pragyika

Ms. Pragyika: I don't know about all of you, but sometimes when I think of my grandfather's generation, I think of various challenges of economic development, as my father has always taught me that's how I learned.

Something was happening in India which pulled younger on the step of a boat. There was economic like home, politics, economic living, culture and the economic support and the changes. I don't know how anyone makes sense of this.

But I know a few years ago when I remember that with all these with my weight, influence, but also I understand, I know education is a useful process in this economic backdrop. My grandfather was a teacher, with words like love, trust,
