ARE YOUR DEVICES SPYING ON YOU? STAYING SECURE IN THE ERA OF CYBER RISK - ADV. PUNEET BHASIN, HONORARY ADVISOR FOR UNITED NATIONS DPG ALLIANCE, ADDRESSES THE CLUB

Good afternoon to everyone here. Thank you for the very gracious introduction.

How many of you don't use smartphones? Not a single hand, right?

OK, so how many of you are worried whether someone will look into what you're doing on your device? How many of you may be concerned that someone may know what's going on? Anyone worried about that? Everybody. Do you think people already know?

From the moment you enter the world of the Internet, for children these days, it is from the point they are born, but in the past, it was much later. For me, it was almost college as smartphone penetration was not there. Now you see it from a very, very young age. You see artificial intelligence coupled with multiple other features of the Internet.

To give you a broad spectrum, now, everybody's aware of the new data protection law. In the year 2023, the Indian Government enacted the Indian Data Protection Act which mandated that anywhere you handle any form of Indian data, user data, data which somehow or the other belongs to an Indian national — be it social media providers or any other platform, including companies with Indian employees — protection under the Data Protection Act becomes mandatory, and compliance for data protection becomes mandatory for those organisations.

Penalties are up to ₹250 crores. If you're wondering why an organisation has not been penalised till now — it was enacted in 2023, however, the rules are still pending, and the formation of the body, there have been multiple dynamics that have changed in our nation in this entire period — multiple crucial issues have come up. Because of this entire situation and lobbying against data sovereignty, one of the most crucial aspects of this particular law in its draft stage before it was enacted in 2023 was data sovereignty — “My nation's data remains within the confines of my nation.” Obviously, you have a lot of big-ticket companies lobbying against that. In the final version of the Act which was enacted, data sovereignty doesn't exist in its absolute form. But yes, it gives the government the power to blacklist certain countries where data cannot be transferred — certain countries where processing of data cannot be done. A copy of the data has to be maintained in India. The office of the organisation has to be in India.

You cannot say, “I'm governed by the laws of XYZ country, but I will take your national data, your citizens' data, and do whatever I want." That option is not there. So, they need to have somebody answerable sitting right here — in India. This law is already enacted. What's awaited is the formation of the Data Protection Authority, which will enforce — obviously in the form of legal proceedings that are bound to happen. Any individual can file a complaint under this Act.

It also happens to me — the moment I book a flight ticket; I start getting messages about different hotels. I get messages about taxi service providers. I'm like, "I have not reached out to any person." So, data travels faster than lightning speed. Today, you just book your ticket, and your data is out there.

In such situations wherein, as an individual, your data is lost — as an organisation, there is a breach of your data that takes place — you can raise a complaint to the Data Protection Authority. Thereafter, the Data Protection Authority summons the organisation to answer:

- What is the data trail?
- What is the compliance that they have in their organisation?
- How has this data set moved out?
- What are the data sets it covers? PI and PII. PI is anything that identifies me — that would mean my name. It would mean anything that you associate with me at that point of time.

PII — that's Personally Identifiable Information. Let's say I have your email ID, I have a mobile number, I have an address, and I have certain other pieces of information. I don't have your name. I don't have exactly who you are, but by piecing together these other pieces of information, I would know exactly whom it pertains to. That's called profiling.

So, the Act is as comprehensive — and, as a matter of fact, much better than the EU GDPR and multiple other legislations across the globe as it covers PI and PII. So, anything that may identify me as me is also covered in this.

As an individual, if you raise a complaint with the Data Protection Authority, accordingly, the organisation is summoned to give answers.

There are multiple offences under the Act — from ₹50 crores onwards till ₹250 crores in penalties, and all of that goes to the Consolidated Fund of India; it does not come to the individual.

An individual has other options. Apart from prosecuting before the Data Protection Authority, there is also the criminal remedy, that is, the data breach litigation, which occurs in the criminal forums — that is, BNS, registering the police complaint — retributive methodology, wherein basically you're trying to bring them to book.

Compensatory methodology is under the Information Technology Act, wherein you can seek compensation up to ₹1 crore. It used to be up to ₹5 crores, and now, with the Data Protection Act, the ₹5 crores part is set aside — it's only up to ₹1, crore.

You can do all three things together.

Why is it that suddenly so much power is being given to you? The threat to you is that much. So, the Data Protection Act also got enacted with a great amount of difficulty. I'm quite certain everyone would be aware of the level of opposition that was there against this Act, not just from the opposition parties, but the kind of media — you could say common knowledge — being created about it: "The government is going to misuse your data, so-and-so person is going to misuse your data."

There was so much of a narrative created around it, because this was going to disrupt — and it already is disrupting — a large number of industries like your digital marketing industries, wherein, today, technically, marketing is only focussed on stealing your data and thereafter selling you things, profiling you. It disrupts all of those industries. And the biggest industry that it disrupts is the cybercrime industry which has surpassed any other form of illegal business that takes place globally. The cybercrime industry has crossed all those different barricades. It's the highest-grossing industry in terms of turnover.

So, you are profiled, and then you are targeted. There are multiple such instances wherein offences, whether financial or physical crimes, are being linked to the Internet.

Before I delve into the 'why' and 'what' of this entire subject...

All of you go to different hospitals for treatment, correct?

Have you ever wondered what the data security in a hospital is like? No one has wondered. When you go back, I would want you to Google and see — one very high-level national leader in a country (again, I will not name) was targeted, and an attempt to murder him was made, by breaching the database of the hospital..

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

Over the past few days, rising tensions at the borders have brought our attention to the brave efforts of the Indian Army, who are selflessly protecting our nation. We Salute to their bravery. 🙏

In light of this situation and current market conditions, we have received several queries regarding the Fire Insurance Policy covering storage at various ports, godowns, and factories.

We would like to clarify that any act of war is explicitly excluded under the scope of all Fire and Personal Accident (PA) policies issued by any General Insurance company.

This is because war risks are considered commercially uninsurable under property and PA insurance policies.

The nature of war-related events can lead to catastrophic losses, potentially threatening the very existence of General Insurance companies and their global reinsurers.

This ensures that the families or legal heirs of insured individuals are not left facing financial hardship during such unfortunate events.

Warm regards,
Rtn. Miral Kilkilraj Shah

Palghar's Vanvasi Named 'Star' Village By EARTHDAY.ORG For Sustainable Environmental Initiatives

On the 55th Anniversary of Earth Day, EARTHDAY.ORG the largest environmental movement in the world has named Vanvasi a remote village in Palghar District, a "Star" village, for its exemplary environmental initiatives.

On the 55th anniversary of Earth Day, EARTHDAY.ORG, the largest environmental movement in the world, has named Vanvasi, a remote village in Palghar District, a "Star" village for its exemplary environmental initiatives.

With support from the Rotary Club of Bombay, donor Geeta Keshavan, and project implementation partner Chirag Rural Development Foundation, Vanvasi has become a beacon of sustainable rural transformation.

The Star Village initiative recognises outstanding community-driven efforts in villages across India that have achieved significant environmental impact.

This remote village in Jawhar Taluka, Palghar District, situated atop hills, comprises 120 families. The Integrated Village Development Programme of the Rotary Club of Bombay has significantly enhanced irrigation practices through the utilisation of solar energy, enabling year-round irrigation. This has allowed the villagers to remain in their villages and has helped mitigate urban migration.

They have begun cultivating cash crops like fragrant mogra, and have established nurseries for producing mango saplings for commercial purposes. Individual water filters and backup solar lights have been provided to every house.

SPREADING SMILES, ONE MEAL AT A TIME: ROTARY CLUB OF BOMBAY'S INSPIRING DONATION DRIVE

A heartwarming display of community spirit and unwavering compassion was witnessed as the Rotary Club of Bombay spearheaded a meaningful meal donation drive from April 25th to May 4th, 2025. This noble initiative brought much-needed sustenance and comfort to the relatives of patients undergoing treatment at the esteemed KEM Hospital and the renowned Wadia Hospital.

Driven by the core values of service and empathy, the Rotary Club of Bombay mobilised its members, encouraging both individual and family participation. The response was truly inspiring, with Rotarians and their loved ones dedicating their time and energy preparing and distributing nutritious meals. Day after day, volunteers could be seen at the designated spot, offering warm smiles and wholesome food to those enduring difficult times while supporting their ailing family members.

Our partner, WithAarya Foundation, has been preparing and distributing 150 freshly cooked meals twice a day for several years. This time, our Club made a small yet meaningful contribution by supporting 3,000 meals over ten days. Beyond the nourishment, the act of personally handing over the meals fostered a deep sense of connection and solidarity. For the recipients, these gestures of kindness offered not only physical sustenance but also emotional comfort, reminding them that they are not alone on their journey.

This drive stands as a shining example of the Rotary Club of Bombay's ongoing commitment to community service and making a tangible difference. The collective effort of its members, along with the enthusiastic involvement of their families, undoubtedly brought relief and hope to countless individuals at KEM and Wadia Hospitals. It serves as a powerful reminder of how compassion and collective action can help alleviate hardship and uplift lives.

The Rotary Club of Bombay extends its heartfelt gratitude to all who contributed their time, resources, and unwavering support to make this initiative a resounding success.

A DAY OF SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY AT SOMAIYA UNIVERSITY SUMMER CAMP FOR BY STUDENTS

The second day of the Somaiya University Summer Camp arranged for the Bhavishya yaan students proved to be an enriching experience for all, particularly in the field of science.

The campers began their day early at 6:30 a.m., setting off for a peaceful morning walk — an energising start to a day packed with learning and exploration.

Following breakfast, the first academic session commenced at 10:00 a.m. This engaging session focused on polymer science and was conducted by Vandana Ma'am and her colleagues. It was filled with hands-on experiments that captured the students' curiosity. The session covered:

- The definition and types of polymers
- How to test the pH range of substances using litmus paper
- A practical demonstration of a double displacement reaction

Afterwards, the group attended a session on environmental science led by Asmita Ma'am. Though largely theoretical, the lecture kept the students interested with meaningful insights into:

- The unique properties of water
- Various chapters within environmental studies
- Notable NGOs working to protect the environment

- Career opportunities in the environmental sciences
- A practical test of the pH of water, cold drink, and buttermilk using a modern device

The students then had a photo session with professors from Somaiya University before heading to lunch.

The final academic session of the day began at 2:30 p.m. and was led by Jacinta Ma'am and her partner. Focused on biotechnology, the session introduced the students to:

- Different branches of biotechnology, each identified by a colour
- Equipment used in biotechnology labs
- The safety measures followed during experiments on plants and animals
- A simple but fascinating experiment to extract DNA from an onion

Following a tea and snack break, the campers enjoyed a sports session from 5:30 to 7:00 p.m., where they played badminton and interacted with new friends.

The day concluded on a high note, having offered a wealth of learning opportunities and hands-on scientific experience. For many participants, it was their first time conducting real experiments in a science laboratory—an inspiring step forward on their journey into the world of science.
