MR. S.V.R. SRINIVAS, DHARAVI REDEVELOPMENT PROJECT CEO, IAS, AND DR. MANJIRI KAMAT, PROFESSOR OF HISTORY, UNIVERSITY OF MUMBAI, IN CONVERSATION WITH RTN. NANDINI SAMPAT ON PROGRESS WITH PURPOSE: BALANCING MUMBAI'S RICH HERITAGE WITH A SUSTAINABLE FUTURE

Rtn. Nandini Sampat:

First, let me say it is our absolute pleasure at the Rotary Club of Bombay to welcome you both this afternoon for a thoughtful and forward-looking conversation that explores the possibilities that emerge when heritage and development are not at odds, but in meaningful dialogue.

To set this panel off, a bit of background: by 2050, Mumbai is projected to become home to over 40 million people, driven largely by the steady migration of those seeking opportunity in the city. This demographic surge will dramatically alter the urban landscape, expand the built environment, shrink open spaces and wetlands, and place unprecedented pressure on housing, transport, and civic infrastructure.

At the same time, it opens up opportunities to rethink how we grow — to catalyse economic dynamism, create more inclusive urban systems, and build a resilient city for future generations. Yet, amidst this transformation, Mumbai's soul — its historic architecture, cultural traditions, and richly layered neighbourhoods — must not be lost. From colonial-era institutions and industrial precincts to chawls, markets, and cosmopolitan ethos, the city's heritage is not a burden, but a foundation.

The question before us is not whether we grow, but how we grow. Can we design a future that safeguards our past? Today, we are privileged to have two exceptional minds with us — one who understands the city through the lens of its past, and the other who is actively shaping its future. Welcome, Dr. Kamat and Mr. Srinivas.

I'll start with a question for both of you. It's a combined question. Migration has always shaped Mumbai. As we look towards 2050, how do you both see the city's character evolving with another major demographic shift? As the city prepares to absorb these millions of people, what must we preserve, and what must we anticipate?

Dr. Manjiri Kamat:

Thank you very much for having me here, and congratulations to the Rotary Club, which is celebrating its 96th year.

Mumbai has been a city of migrants right from early times. If one looks at the subsequent censuses during the colonial period, we see these bursts of growth at certain intervals. So, this isn't the first time we are facing the challenge of migration — and space has always been limited, which remains a reality even today.

How we prepare for it, and what lessons we can draw from the past, is the question. Historically, with every major spurt of migration or crisis, there have been developments in policymaking. For example, after the bubonic plague at the end of the 19th century, the Bombay City Improvement Trust was formed. It focused on affordable housing for the poor, road widening, and East–West thoroughfares — just to name a few initiatives.

After World War I, the city saw a tremendous influx of migrants due to job opportunities in the cotton mills. At that time, the Government of Bombay took the lead in starting the Bombay Development Directorate, which planned housing projects — what later became the BDD chawls — and housing for the police. There was also an effort to encourage people to move northwards due to congestion in the island city.

Post-World War II, there was a major influx of refugees due to Partition, which again necessitated a rehabilitation plan. So, this is not new, and since Independence, we've seen a continuous increase in population.

What's needed now is for the government and various policymaking bodies in the city to come together and coordinate. For instance, Charles Correa's plan for Navi Mumbai aimed to reduce congestion in South Mumbai by promoting industrial and residential development across the harbour. But even today, congestion persists, and that vision hasn't fully materialised.

We had another golden opportunity during deindustrialisation, when mill lands became available. There were struggles by mill workers. Correa's plan reserved some land for open spaces, some for affordable housing, and the rest for profitable redevelopment — but unfortunately, that too did not materialise.

So, the lesson for us today is to think holistically: Who are we planning for? Indiscriminate redevelopment — bulldozing the city's fabric to build towers — is not the solution. The way forward is to plan collaboratively, as has been done in the past, so the city can cope with the pressures of migration.

Mr. S.V.R. Srinivas:

Good afternoon to all of you, and thank you, Nandini, for your kind introduction. I'm happy to be sharing this stage with a historian, because Mumbai's story begins with history — it was given as dowry to Catherine of Braganza by the Portuguese, valued at 1,000 pounds. That was the “net worth” of Mumbai at the time. Today, of course, we think of it in terms of five-star hotels, but that was their valuation then.

Coming to the current context, migration is an inexorable phenomenon, with its own internal logic. We have an empirical example in China, where attempts were made to stop migration under Chairman Mao, but they failed miserably.

Migration is inevitable. It happens at the rate of 250 families per day. By the time we finish this session, 20 families will have settled on Mumbai's footpaths or in slums. Mumbai is uniquely distinguished by having an institution called the ‘slumlord’ under the Act, officially recognised. It is the only city in India where this is the case.

So, what is to be done?

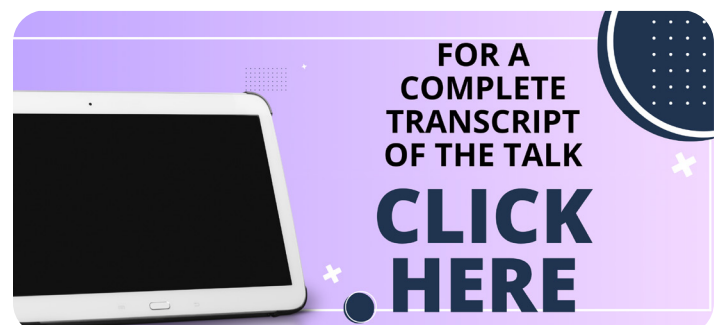

As Dr. Kamat rightly mentioned, we can't just bulldoze our way into the future. Contextualisation is critical when approaching development. One solution I've long supported — but which has yet to materialise — is affordable rental housing for migrants.

Globally, cities like London and Singapore have robust rental housing systems for migrants, managed not by governments but by Section 8 companies. This should be implemented here. It would help ensure that the city remains liveable while also supporting economic growth.

Cities are engines of economic growth — urban areas today generate 60–70% of GDP. 70% of electricity consumption and product consumption happens in cities. Look at infrastructure — bullet trains, airports — all are focused on cities, not rural towns.

So, migration cannot be stopped. We need to manage it. Regarding the earlier question on high-rises, there is indeed a serious academic debate. Many planners and architects argue that high-rises are a necessary solution for megacities. Books have been written by senior scholars on this subject.

A similar debate occurred in mid-20th-century New York, between..

A MELODIOUS EVENING AT ANANDA YAAN

On July 18th, the Ananda Yaan centre in Mazgaon, part of the Rotary Club of Bombay's renowned Elder Day Care Programme, hosted a heartwarming musical evening for underprivileged senior citizens. Fifteen musically gifted and socially conscious professionals from a prominent corporate house performed with great enthusiasm, filling the air with joy and soulful melodies.

Rtn. Charu Agarwal, Co-chair of Ananda Yaan, kindly arranged refreshments for all attendees, while PP Ramesh Narayan provided gifts for the performers.

Sincere thanks to everyone who helped make this uplifting event truly special for our elders.

The elders responded with equal fervour, clapping and singing along, their faces lit up with happiness. It was a perfect example of how meaningful corporate involvement and community welfare initiatives can come together to create a lasting impact. The evening also included a thoughtful birthday video message recorded for Rtn. Ptn. Ekta Shah.

BHARDA'S INTERACT CLUB POWERS PLASTIC RECYCLING

On Friday, July 18th, Mrs. Kunti Oza, founder of The Clean Mumbai Foundation, visited Bharda New High School and Junior College to engage students on the importance of recycling and environmental responsibility.

Addressing an attentive audience, Mrs. Oza spoke about the significance of collecting milk bags and plastic bags, and explained the recycling process in simple, relatable terms. She highlighted how young citizens can play a powerful role in maintaining cleanliness in their surroundings and spreading awareness within their communities.

Mrs. Oza also commended the school for its impressive efforts in the previous year, where students had collected a large quantity of milk bags for recycling. Encouraged by her praise, students expressed renewed enthusiasm and confidence in surpassing their past contributions.

Her inspiring words left a lasting impact, motivating the students to take ownership of their environment and continue making a positive difference.

AN EVENING OF FELLOWSHIP AND FLAVOUR

On July 18th, Rtn. Akhil Sanghi and Rtn. Ptn. Madhavi graciously hosted a Rotary Assimilation Dinner at their residence, welcoming around 40 Rotarians along with their spouses.

The evening was filled with warmth, camaraderie, and lively conversation. True to the Rotary spirit of “fellowship through service,” members shared experiences, ideas, and personal stories that reflected the Club’s enduring values.

New members had the valuable opportunity to engage with senior Rotarians, gaining insight into the Club’s legacy, values, and the wide array of ongoing committees and community projects.

Over a delightful spread of home-cooked food and drinks, conversations flowed freely, creating a relaxed and inviting atmosphere.

The gathering concluded with laughter, smiles, and a renewed sense of unity, strengthening the bonds among members and reaffirming the spirit that defines the Rotary Club of Bombay.

Time, Responsibility and Creativity Shine at Bhavishya Yaan

On July 23rd, students from Bhavishya Yaan's NMJ school, Std 7 to 10 participated in a day filled with awareness, creativity, and personal growth. For Std 9 and 10 students, a special session on mobile addiction shed light on the silent but significant ways in which excessive phone usage robs individuals of their most valuable resource—time.

The session encouraged students to reflect on the importance of time management, discipline, and mindful use of technology. The core message resonated deeply: Be the master of your time, not a slave to your mobile.

Simultaneously, a dynamic drawing competition was held for Std 7 and 8 students on the theme "How to Be a Responsible Citizen." Divided into seven groups, students worked together to create compelling visuals that reflected civic awareness and social values. Through teamwork and imagination, they highlighted vital messages such as:

- Dispose of garbage responsibly
- Save water, trees, and protect animals
- Follow traffic rules and reuse plastic

- Promote environmental care and communal harmony
- Show respect to elders and all religions

The competition not only brought out the students' artistic talents but also instilled important values of cooperation, social responsibility, and active citizenship.

It was a truly enriching experience to see these young learners grasp essential life lessons through both introspection and artistic expression. The day served as a meaningful reminder that education is not just about academics, but about shaping thoughtful, responsible individuals.

COMPASSION IN ACTION FOR ELDER CARE IN AWAS, ALIBAUG

The Rotary Club of Bombay continues its meaningful commitment to community service through the Elder Care Centre situated in the Awas School Complex. This centre, established years ago through the initiative of PP Ramesh Narayan and PP Ashish Vaid, remains a vital space for senior citizens from Awas and Dhokawade villages. Under the watchful care of Vidya—the devoted caretaker and cook—the centre offers breakfast and a peaceful environment where the elderly gather to read the daily Marathi newspaper and relax in comfortable wooden armchairs.

Recently, Rtn. Pilloo and Rtn. Ptn. Cyrus visited the centre to spend quality time with the senior citizens. Conversing fluently in Marathi, they engaged warmly with the elders and enquired about essential local facilities such as water supply, electricity, sewage systems, road conditions, and transport services. Their genuine interest and interaction made the visit especially meaningful.

The duo also brought joy to the gathering by distributing thoughtful gifts, including sun P-caps, biscuits, Smooth drinks, and other takeaway items. They enjoyed breakfast and tea alongside the residents, making the morning both heartwarming and memorable.

Rtn. Pilloo and Rtn. Ptn. Cyrus Aga further encouraged other Rotarians and RCB members residing in Alibaug to visit the centre and actively participate in this commendable initiative. Their visit exemplified the spirit of service that RCB upholds.

With gratitude, Rtn. Pilloo Aga also expressed thanks for being appointed Vice Chairperson for the Elder Care Centre—a role she embraces with dedication and honour.

NIGHT STUDY CENTRE VISIT: INSPIRING EDUCATIONAL EXPERIENCE

The NSC in South Mumbai, jointly operated by the Bombay YMCA and the Rotary Club of Bombay, accommodates over 650 children. Its primary objective is to offer students a conducive environment for focused learning throughout their academic journey. The facility aims to provide a nurturing atmosphere for students to study under the mentorship of teachers, fostering a sense of community and support.

The Rotary Club of Bombay launched a commendable initiative to support the health and academic performance of Night Study Centre students by implementing a nutritional supplement programme. Approximately 600 students have already benefited from this programme. Additionally, the initiative extends its positive impact to women belonging to a Self-Help Group (SHG), empowering them through this holistic approach. At the centres, we provide an evening snack and a tutor to guide the students with their homework. These centres are set up near their homes and localities.

Apart from the NSC classes, a get-together programme is organised for the students. This serves as a platform where students have the opportunity to interact with others from different backgrounds and mindsets. In this get-together, students also get the chance to showcase their talents and skills.

On Wednesday, July 23rd, the Night Study Centre committee organised a visit to the Prabhadevi Centre near Century Bhavan, creating a unique opportunity to interact with students and make a positive impact on their educational journey. The visit was attended by President Bimal Mehta, Hon. Secretary Rtn. Farhat Jamal, NSC Chairperson Rtn. Jamshyd Vazifdar, Rtn. Ptn. Niloufer Vazifdar, Satellite Members Rtn. Dev Shah and Rtn. Rishabh Makhija. Mr. Allen Kotian, Hon. Secretary of YMCA, along with his team, were also present.

During the visit, we had the privilege of distributing study kits to the students, conducting a storytelling session, and providing them with a small snack box to keep their energy levels up.

One of the highlights of the visit was listening to three students share their inspiring educational journeys with the Night Study Centre. Hartej Gali, a dedicated learner, is currently studying German and Japanese, showcasing his commitment to exploring new languages and cultures. Aryan Kanse, on the other hand, has delved into the world of Vedic Maths, impressing us all with his ability to solve complex mathematical problems with ease. In addition to the engaging activities and insightful speeches, we were thrilled to distribute stationery kits to the students, ensuring that they have the necessary tools to excel in their studies. These study kits are a small gesture of our commitment to supporting and empowering students in their educational pursuits.

It was heart-warming to see so many talented and intelligent students at the Prabhadevi Centre taking full advantage of the opportunities presented to them. Through initiatives like the Night Study Centre visit, we aim to foster a culture of continuous learning and growth, empowering students to reach their full potential and achieve their academic goals.

The visit to the Prabhadevi Centre was a testament to the transformative power of education and the profound impact that dedicated individuals and organisations can have on shaping the future of young learners. By providing students with the resources, support, and encouragement they need to thrive, the Night Study Centre is helping to create a brighter and more promising tomorrow for all.

The visit was a truly enriching and inspiring experience for both students and Rotarians alike. As we continue to support and empower young learners on their educational journey, we are reminded of the boundless potential and talent that exists within each and every student. Through initiatives like this visit, we are honoured to play a small but significant role in shaping the future of education and creating a brighter tomorrow for all.
